We remember the U of T men who lost their lives 100 years ago this month, all from illness probably connected to the influenza pandemic:

- Sapper Lyall Arnold Stokes served with the Canadian Engineers at many battles including Passchendaele, Amiens, Arras, and Cambrai. After the Armistice he was in Germany with the Army of Occupation when he succumbed to pneumonia on Feb. 3.

- Lieutenant Edmond Alan Gunn enlisted with the University Overseas Training Company, which trained U of T men for commissions with the British forces. Subsequently joining the Royal Garrison Artillery, he served on the Ypres, Arras and other fronts. After the Armistice, when on his way with his battery to join the Army of Occupation, he became ill with pneumonia and died on February 13, 1919.

- Captain Thomas Harold Hill Bevan served with the Canadian Machine Gun Corps. He was wounded and gassed at Vimy Ridge on April 11, 1917; and on returning to the front he served through Passchendaele, then invalided with trench fever, then returned to an administrative post then invalided again in May 1918. He went to the front a third time in September 1918 and served through the fighting from Cambrai to Mons. In February 1919 he became ill and died in hospital on February 18, 1919.

- Lieutenant-Colonel William John Ogilvie Malloch graduated from Medicine in 1896 and was working as an MD at Toronto General Hospital and on faculty at U of T. In 1915 he was appointed to No. 4, U of T General Hospital and he went overseas with many other U of T doctors and nurses to Greece and later England. After returning to Canada in February 1919 he became ill with pneumonia and died Feb. 19.

- Captain William Thomas Hackett served with the Canadian Army Dental Corps, first at Toronto and Niagara Camps, then overseas in England and later the Jura Mountains district. He died of pneumonia on February 25, 1919.
