In Flanders Fields
John McCrae

In Flanders fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly
Scarce heard amid the guns below.

We are the Dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved, and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe:
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high.
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders fields.

Lieutenant-Colonel John McCrae (1872–1918)
graduated from University College and the Faculty of Medicine at University of Toronto. He was a veteran of the South African War. This poem was composed during the Great War in May 1915 while he served as a medical officer at the 2nd Battle of Ypres. John McCrae died of complications from pneumonia in 1918 while in active service.

VII. READING
Dr. Eric McGeer, School of Continuing Studies
Military Historian

BA, St. Michael's College, 1940
Captain, ‘A’ Company, 1st Canadian Parachute Battalion
Officer Commanding, 2nd Battalion
Royal Canadian Regiment

Seventy-five years after the end of the Second World War, we remember John Anthony Clancy, a 1940 graduate who distinguished himself in the hard, costly fighting necessary to achieve the liberation of Europe. The University of Toronto rightly honours him and the thousands of its young men and women who set aside their own pursuits and desires to make their contribution to the defence of freedom and the hope of a better world. Five hundred and fifty-seven did not return.

XIV. THE ACT OF REMEMBRANCE

An excerpt from “For the Fallen” by Laurence Binyon:
They shall grow not old, as we that are left grow old:
Age shall not weary them, nor the years condemn.
At the going down of the sun and in the morning
We shall remember them.
